Discover the power of the TruBridge Denial Management Program

When is the last time you took a look at your denied claims process? According to a July 2017 Modern Healthcare article, denials cost hospitals $262 billion annually. A typical hospital can put about 10% of their revenue at risk due to denied claims, an amount that can be difficult to recoup in other areas.

TruBridge offers a multidisciplinary approach to denial management that helps reduce denied claims and increase the cash your facility collects. By taking a flexible and customizable three-step approach we’re able to help you improve the entire process.

By utilizing data analytics, best-practice tools and consulting, as well as on-going performance management, TruBridge works to ensure you receive the payment you deserve for the care you provide.
On-site assessment of current workflows from patient registration through claims submission
Comparison of current denial workflow to denial root causes
Re-engineering of workflows and implementation of best practices
Automation of the claim denial management process

Once we have a better understanding of your situation, we are able to move on to the second step. It begins with an on-site assessment that looks at your entire workflow process from registering patients to submitting claims. That understanding allows us to compare your workflow to the root causes of your denials and rebuild your workflows by implementing best practices. Finally, when appropriate, we implement HFMA Peer Reviewed automation tools to help manage your claim denial process.

Monitoring to ensure root causes of denials are resolved
Fine tuning of work flow modifications as needed
On-going trend reporting

One of the most important aspects of denial management is to ensure you have ongoing surveillance. With the TruBridge Denial Management Program, we provide weekly performance tracking and on-going trend analysis. Should the need arise for additional workflow modifications; we’ll be there to help you. This ongoing surveillance ensures you’re able to stay in command of your denial management process at all times.
